Bredesen only match for Corker

Raleigh, N.C. - Bob Corker is not enormously well liked, but he starts out the 2012 cycle strongly favored for re-election unless popular ex-governor Phil Bredesen jumps into the race. Even in far-fetched, never-going-to-happen matchups with celebrities Al Gore and Tim McGraw, Corker jumps out to leads of between 15 and 23 points.

Bredesen has a 46-41 advantage over Corker. As a Southern Democrat in a relatively red state, Bredesen plotted a moderate path as governor, and as a consequence, $57 \%$ of Republicans, $61 \%$ of independents, and $71 \%$ of Democrats see him positively, for an astounding overall 63-19 favorability rating. As such, he locks up $83 \%$ of his party's vote against Corker and $15 \%$ of the GOP, plus a 43-34 lead with independents.

Corker himself has only a 42-36 approval rating, which puts him about in the middle of the pack of 79 senators on which PPP has polled in the last year. Unlike Bredesen, Corker polarizes the two parties and splits independents, as most politicians do.

But despite a good chunk of his voters still not expressing an opinion on his job performance, and those who do not overly satisfied, Corker still manages to best every other candidate tested against him by a wide margin. Against Gore, the former inhabitant of the state's other Senate seat, Corker prevails, 53-38. Gore is by far the best-known candidate tested, but voters split 41-50 against him personally. Corker also tops country star McGraw, who has mentioned a desire to seek office as a Democrat in the past, by a 50-28 margin. McGraw is well liked across the board, but surprisingly almost half of voters are not sure how they feel about him. Corker prevails against Harold Ford, Jr., 5532, much wider than the three points by which he beat Ford to take the seat in 2006. Ford has since renounced Tennessee and proclaims he is a New Yorker now. Corker beats Rep. Jim Cooper, 50-32, and former Rep. Bart Gordon, 52-29. In all the non-Bredesen matchups, Corker expands on the GOP's 43-37 turnout advantage over the Democrats by posting leads of 18 to 26 points with independents and earning far more Democratic support than his challengers do Republican votes.
"Bob Corker’s in a pretty strong position for reelection unless Phil Bredesen runs," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling.

PPP surveyed 500 Tennessee voters from February $9^{\text {th }}$ to $13^{\text {th }}$. The survey's margin of error is $+/-4.4 \%$. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
